ANCIENT TALIAN CITY SCENE OF MANY HISTORIC BATTLES OPENS ROAD TO ROME FOR FIFTH ARMY

German destroyers in the Bay of Biscay and cuppling of others-was announced today.

HISTORY haunts this focal Nazi stronghold, to reach which the Yanks of the Fifth Army have been battling in winter-swept mountains just behind those snown in the artist's sketch, which also indicates the tough sort of country facing our troops.

But once taken, the inset map indicates the open nibal fought the Roman legions.

A Place for Compromise

SEN. TAPT's proposal for gerring too government out of hot water on the tolcher vote problem is one of the tea constructive ideas to come out of a heated discussion.

Sen. Taft, revognizing that the Constitution leaves authority over elections with the states, ; also recognizes that the states need guidance and coordination if saidiers wanting to use their franchise in the next precidential election are going to be given that privilege

He suggests, therefore, that a federal commission to promote revision of state laws governing absentee voting be calculished. This commission, presumably, would propose a model statute for immediate adoption, in some states, primary dates would need to be advanced, to allow sufficient time between them and election day. In cases where revision proved impossible, perhaps because of mability to convene legislatures, federal builots would be provided.

Sen. Taft, who is more and more playing the role of the great compromiser in the upper house of congress, has made a proposal which deserves the thoughtful attention of all congressmen. The Constitution must be honored in the unprecedented matter of registering the roldier vote, but to honor it at the expense of the rights of United States citizens is as far from the spirit of the document as to turn the problem over willy-nilly to a federal commusion without regard to the rights of states.

Pigs That Went to Market

BEFORE the whole country yields to the suggestion that it should be deeply grateful to the reigning powers in Washington for a Christmas present of pork points, it should remember this isn't something out of the kindness of OPA's heart.

This is a move to effect the results of mishandling price ceilings. Shortages of corn and, the fact that many producers can't afford to keep their pigs any longer has caused unduly large amounts of pork to be dumped on the market. The condition has not been created by the goodwill of mankind but by the confusion of a government-directed wartime economy.

Conquest of Distance

ENACTLY how many men and women were heard on the Christmas broadcasts which brought listeners at home into contact with members of the armed services abroad remains for the radio industry to tabulate, but it was a, considerable number. More important than those who had the privilege of speaking were the multitudes they spoke for-all the sons, husbands, brothers and sisters who could not be home for Christmas. Their thoughts became for an instant articulate through the words of their representatives.

There have been many occasions during the war to stand in amazement before the conquest of distance by our new mechanical facilities. No single occasion, however, has been more spectacular than this bringing together from all parts of the earth the voices of Americans on wartime duty. Today, at last, it is literally true that no one needs to be cut off from contact with his fellows---and everything accomplished so far, no matter how miraculous-is only a promise of the greater things to come as more of the potentialities of instantineous communiention are replized.

Changing Russia

ONE of the most misleading ideas of our times is that of Russia standing the buffeting of war with no changes in its composition

Russia, like the United States and Great Britain, is subject to the impact of world upheaval. More than either of its great idlies, it was reshaped by the impact of war a quarter of a century ago. The reverberations of that explosion were still shaking the nation when World war II began.

The announcement of a new national anthem to replace "The Internstionale" is typical of a surging undercurrent of thought inside Bussia. This news confirms the earlier impression of change left by dissolution of the Third International last spring. The effect in both instances is to remove from worldwide carculation a symbol of worldwide revolution. The Russians seek stability now, not revolution,

Even before the war, Russia had change! vastly from the pattern of the original resolation. Premier Stalin, himself, was numbered for an admission that Marxist Communism had not been put into effect; that Russia had mode a compromise between political theory and While Americans continue to fear that somehow the ideology of Communism may be forsted on them through the influence of Russia in a post-war world, it is reasonable to believe there are Russians who tear the ideology of Cenamunism may be lost in the shuffle. Russia is not immune to the stresses and strains of the tremendous experience at has survived. Certainly it is not immune to the same forces which have changed every participant in the war L ke all the others, it has dealt with reality with the instruments of reality, not with the incomes of ; revolution.

March 15 Puzzle Draws Near

IN a few weeks, long, heavy envelopes containing March 1944 tax experts even after months of income tax blanks will be marled to 50,000,000 of us, including 10,000,000 of us, including 10,000,000 of who never saw a tax blank before, and tax officials in Washington have their tingers crossed. For, according to an article by Sylvia Porter, well-known financial authority, in the January Header's Digest, the new tax blanks are "the most brutally statement of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country of the country financial authority, in the January fleader's Digest, the new tax blanks are "the most brutally complicated and unintelligible forms ever issued by any government to its citizens."

FARMYARD FISH

Br The Associated Press
ALBUQUERQUE, N. M. The dust bowl finally has produced a fish story-but not the kind you expect. It's a story entitled "Technique of Fishpond Management' and it was written by Lt. Lawrence V. Compton, former associate biologist of the Soil Conservation Service in Albuquerque. It tells how to raise fish in a farmyard fish-pond and says a one-half acre pond will produce 100 pounds of lish a year, supplementing war ra-

The farmyard fish study was started after the soil conservation service advocated the construction of small rain-catching reservoirs one means of compatting the old dust bowl conditions. Then it was discovered the nonds were capable of raising fish as well us toring water.

milk sugar capsules. Those who were taking milk sugar capsules thought they were cold vaccines. Counting the number of colds in the two groups the ones who took cold capsules had a few more colds than the ones who tale the milk sugar. A report states that hypodermic vaccines reduce colds about 25 per cent, but such cases have never wandered up my alley.

I don't know why people want to avoid colds so much anyway. The old remedies are the best. You sit before a hot fire and your mother rubs hartshorn liniment on your chest, and covers it with a flannel cloth. Your feet are in a mustard foot bath.
